And at this final gathering-place Two ways divide the human race; Here at this parting of the ways All journeying souls must halt and list, To hear the distant bugle notes From Elysian Heights or Stygian Depths; And every soul will catch the tone That calls it to its destined zone. Here leads a steep and narrow way, Where neither knave nor fool would stray; It beckons those who neer despised The wisdom of the lettered sage, Nor scorned to heed Uranias word, Who whispered in their mortal ear That souls with mates whove gone before May reunite at Heavens door. The other way, descending, wide, Appeals to those who neer denied Their selfish instincts fullest vent. The cunning witchery of its glare Entrances such imprudent souls And lures them to the tempters den, Where spear-tailed demons lie in wait To sting them...
