What with their incessant ringing, the humming in the overhead wires, and the shouting to people to get out of the way, there was very little quiet to be had anywhere. The cars run close to the North side of S. Thomas Church, and whilst listening to the music there, I found these street noises very disturbing. I was much struck with the interior of this church. Expecting to see a barn-like arrangement of seats, after Protestant principles, I was agreeably surprised to find instead, a stately Cathedral-like interior, with aisles of the same height as the nave, and with side galleries reaching only half-way across the width of the aisles, leaving the grand arcade of nave pillars free. The seats are modern and low, and the pulpit is placed against the second pillar from the East, on the South side of the nave....
