Excerpt: .pens for an hour every night; he directed them to begin Saturday the iSth January, being moonlight; but they refused, and all of them went to their houses. Witness then directed the driver Wiltshire to go to every negro-house, and acquaint them they should be exchanged for defendant s Gingerland negroes if they did not come to their work on Monday morning. Says, they came t- work on Monday, and he then informed them that he would forgive their disobedience in not carrying out the dung on Saturday, observing, that perhaps they had erred through bad advice; witness, however, gave them to understand his orders on that subject must be obeyed that night; but at night they all ran away, except a few old families. Says, none of the negroes came to their work on Tuesday morning. Witness went over to his father, the defendant, to ask his advice; soon after his return saw Mr. Tobin (the attorney of the former owner), bringing home about sixty of the negroes; witness desired them to go into the field to their work; some of the women did so immediately, some not until the day was far advanced, and several not until the following morning; only one man came into the field till Saturday following, when about three more made their appearance. On Saturday night and Sunday, being the 20th and 21st of January, most of the men came home, some of their own accord, and some brought in by...
