This is your opportunity to begin to put into practice the principles that you have already read about in the book Making Leadership Magic. This journal is your way to begin to integrate the important principle of: Imitate, Emulate, and Innovate and also the very important principal of Evaluate. This is the beginning of how you start to implement new change into your life. You will see a self-evaluation, followed by a sample observation. As you begin to evaluate your own leadership, you will be able to find areas that you can improve on. You can then observe examples of leaders around you and start to implement change in your own leadership methods. You will also see that each page is broken down into simple and basic questions that permit you to not only observe the leadership skills of others but to also evaluate your own leadership skills and make a plan of action to develop and grow your own skills. That is a how you can truly apply the principles that...
